Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Live Forever

And Never Let Them Hit You With Anything At The St. Patrick's Day Parade

By Dan Rattiner

Scientists are now claiming that by the year 2090 they will have figured a way for human beings to live forever. They'll be able to do a genetic screening of an infant shortly after birth, isolate the evil chromosomes that will at a later date cause diabetes, emphysema, kidney failure, and cancer, take out these bad chromosomes, put in new ones and then as time goes by, give you anti-aging pills, so barring an accident, you'll live forever. It will be Ponce De Leon's search for the Fountain of Youth come true and for practically all of us alive today, it will be too late. We'll have died before then.

But addressing here all you unborn, the only way you'll die after that is by accident. A piece of a building in New York City falls on you, you die of smoke inhalation when your house catches on fire or you get hit by a bagel.

All this occurred to me the other day listening to Bob Schepps and why he wasn't going to the Westhampton Beach St. Patrick's Day Parade. It seems the general populous here in America, supported by the government, has begun to prepare for the day when living forever is a possibility. So many new laws have been passed in the last ten years, increasingly designed to keep human beings from physical harm, and it's come all the way down to bagels.

"They had complaints last year," the officer said. "A couple of people got bonked on the head."

Bob Schepps owns Hampton Bagels. They have two small factory stores, one in East Hampton and one in Shinnecock on County Road 39. Bob and his kids and his employees go down to the bagel stores every morning at 4 a.m. and begin making the day's quotas in the giant bagel ovens that they have in the back. They make plain, poppy and sesame, they make onion, garlic, spinach, raison and blueberry.

For years, on the morning of the St. Patrick's Day Parade, Bob and his crew would make 1200 green bagels to give out. On parade day they would load up these 1200 bagels in the back of the giant Hampton Bagel van and by noon be in the line of marchers. Just prior to the start of the parade, they'd inflate green balloons with helium and fly them out the windows.

Then Bob would get in the driver's seat and as the parade would begin, an assistant would stand

Serving the Hamptons for over 25 years

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Whether Sean Puffy Combs has a future in the Hamptons is a topic that seems to be in discussion these days. Combs denies that he's going to cop a plea about the weapons charges filed against him and claims that he is absolutely innocent. He's also denied that he's closing his magazine Notorious, saying that he's suspending publication for a while to re-tool it. He say's it's not interesting enough for him and he wants an editor who will understand his philosophy, handle it and leave him out of it.

Hamptonite Jann Wanner is going to have his hands full with his new US Weekly magazine. Competition includes People, Instyle and Entertainment Weekly. Rolling Stone which Wanner also publishes is of course another matter.

Look for Abe Rosenthal's new book, Thirty-Eight Witnesses about the Kitty Genevese murder years ago in which thirty-eight people stood silently nearby while she was killed in Queens. Rosenthal the former editor of The New York Times lives in Bellport.

Mark this in your appointment book, Thursday, May 4, at The Plaza, the eighth annual salute to achievement inner-city winners for Tony Duke's Boys Harbor and girls too.

Gary Glanz of Southampton has launched greenshoe.com, an innovative Internet financial products and service provider. Also, newwallet.com, an Internet payment solution provider. Also, jackdoe.com the next card for college students. Harley Lippman is the CEO and Margarette Purdy is the president of the newwallet.com division.

Rabbi David Gelfand will leave the Jewish Center of the Hamptons in East Hampton in an outreach program of inter-denominational unity with 750 other synagogues across the country. The event, Friday night, March 31, will have a Shabbat Across America, a program uniting Judaism's four major movements.

Mark Alexander who has run the Ruth Eckerd Hall in Clearwater, Florida for the last eight years has been appointed as the new Executive Director for the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.

at the open door at the back and one by one, overhand and underhand, toss green bagels to the crowd. Given the crowd estimates, by the end of the day Bob would have given one bagel to approximately every fourth parade goer, quite an achievement. But as I've said, Hampton Bagels does not participate in the St. Patrick's Day Parade anymore, even though Schepps last name is Irish and his wife's maiden name is Dempsy.

Several years ago, as always, he arrived at the line of the parade at twelve o'clock up by the Westhampton school. The parade would go down South Road and left on School Lane, right on Potunk Lane and then left on Main Street until it would come to an end up by Library Street.

But at ten minutes to one, a police officer came up to Bob, had him lower the window, and told him he wasn't going to be allowed to give out his 1200 bagels.

"Why not?" Bob asked.

"They had complaints last year," the officer said. "A couple of people got bonked in the head."

Bob thought of the 1200 bagels in the back that he had worked so hard to make that morning. They'd all be stale in forty-eight hours.

"What would you like me to do?" he told the police officer. "We have over a thousand of them."

"You could hand them out," the officer said.

"It's just me and an assistant," Bob said. "How am I going to do that? If you have four officers you could spare, maybe we could do it that way."

"We can't spare any men," the officer said.

"Well, look," Bob said, "I'll do the best I can."

The line of the parade went off and Bob's assistant in the back would take two or three bagels, run out into the crowd, and hand them to people. At the times the parade would come to a halt, Bob would jump out of the van, run around the back, grab a couple himself and do the same thing. Inside of fifteen minutes they were both exhausted. They probably had given out about a hundred and fifty bagels.

We're gonna have to do it the old fashioned way," Bob said. "What's the worst that can happen? At the end they'll give me a ticket? They should have told me this last year or even just a week ahead."

And so down South Road and left on School and right on Potunk, Bob and his assistant proceeded to throw bagel after bagel into the crowd and nobody died.

At the left turn to go down to Main Street however, a group of six police officers marched in from the side directly in front of them, making a human chain. Bob pulled his truck to a stop; they were motioning him down a side street.

"Parade's over for you," one of them said.

For the next hour, as the parade continued by, Bob argued his way out of a summons and threats of serving time for refusing to obey a direct order from the Police Department.

"My assistant that year," Bob said, "was my fifteen year old son. This was not a good experience for him as far as I could see. We wound up with about three hundred bagels still to go, we split them up, brought them to the stores and just gave them away later that day and the next morning."

It seems to me that before they dangled the prospect of eternal life in front of us some years ago, we could do just about anything, even if it might have lethal consequences. People drove cars without seatbelts, swung back with a closed fist if they got hit in the jaw, (today they swing back with a fist full of legal papers), ate food and medicine without looking for the date of expiration, reading the warnings or having a tamper proof seal to break; we even allowed our kids to swing on Jungle Gyms, from which they could fall and break their heads.

Personally, I have a tiny scar on my back, where in fifth grade I leaped up for a fly ball by the right field wall after school on the sand lot field at the grammar school, caught the ball but came down on one of the metal spikes on a chain link fence. I had four stitches and was lucky I hadn't punctured my lung.

Today if a school allowed a fence like that by a ball field, they'd fire the grounds-keeper, the principal, the superintendent, and they'd file a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the architect and the general contractor who put it in.

We're working on living forever, we haven't quite got there yet, but we're on our way. It used to be you'd go to a funeral and people would say, "He died doing what he loved to do, we all have to die anyway." Today, they won't even let you watch a parade for fear you'll get clanked with a bagel. Next, they'll be banning lollipops and taffy and jellybeans that are traditionally thrown at this annual event. A ninety year old man will be shot dead by a jealous husband and we'll say, "Too bad he had to die, I know he died doing what he loved, but that's no excuse."

Lions Shipped Out

Their Job Done In North Haven, The African Lions Are Shipped Back To Cape Town

By Dan Rattiner

The deer problem in North Haven is over and it is safe for the residents of that peninsula to go out at night again. The deer have lost, the lions have won and the lions have been caught and caged and will shortly be shipped back to South Africa from whence they've come, happy, well fed and lazy after five weeks of doing what lions do best, which is hunting. The eight hundred residents of North Haven owe a debt of gratitude to these five lions and the multi-billionaire who brought them here in early February to once and for all do the job.

It was three years ago, that the mayor of North Haven hired a Florida firm to send a small plane with infra red detection devices over the four mile long peninsula during the night to count the deer population. For more than a dozen years before that decision and for three years since that decision the number of deer in North Haven has created a crises in that community, eating the shrubbery, leaping fences, swallowing up landscaping, getting hit by cars and upon occasion running out of food, especially in the winter time and then going through the garbage cans of the residents.

> "The village is in the process of drafting an ordinance denying entry to both deer and lions not born here..."

During this time the local residents have done nothing but argue the matter. Should the deer be shot, tranquilized and carted off to the Adirondacks, be spayed or fixed, poisoned or feed healthy food, or just left alone? There's an old saying that if you have three New Yorkers, you have four opinions. On North Haven peninsula, there must have been a thousand opinions amongst the eight hundred residents, and nothing was ever done until the beginning of February. Then, a wealthy South African named Hans Van der Klerk who had decided he wanted to have a house in the Hamptons, bought the old six acre Callan estate sight unseen. Arriving here in the last week of January to see his new domain, he found that amidst the docks and boathouse, guest cottage and main house, there were half a dozen deer eating the lawn. As Van der Klerk owns numerous silver, gold and bauxite mines in the outback of South Africa he knew immediately that his bringing in five lions would solve the problem.

He had them tranquilized, caged and rounded up in the Bagalok and Kalahari sections of South Africa and shipped to North Haven where they arrived on February 5. Signs were put up on all the telephone poles in North Haven on February 6, warning residents to stay in their homes at night – lions are nocturnal animals – until February 28. And in the morning since the children get early busses during the early dawn hours, to forego the busses and drive them directly to school themselves.

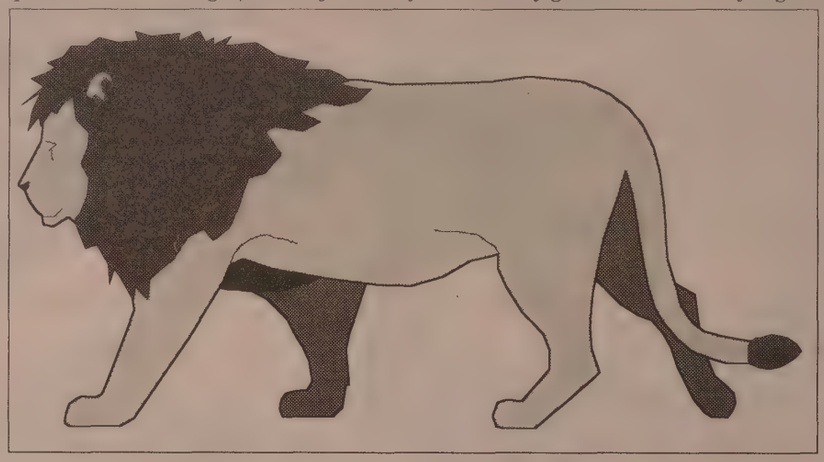
Van der Klerk had done the math with the deer and the lions and he wasn't far off. He predicted the lions would finish off the seven hundred deer in three weeks; in fact it took four and a half. These particular lions are slow eaters.

Four of the five lions were then found and tranquilized on the peninsula three days ago, and yesterday the final one was found roaming the Noyac Golf Course six miles away and taken in as well. All five of them should be shipped back to South Africa before Sunday.

For the most part this whole situation has been applauded by the residents of North Haven who, after all these years, are thankful to be rid of the deer. There are some however, who do not see this balancing of nature aided by the hand of man, which is what it was, in a positive light. One particularly vocal opponent is Mrs. Enid Gretch, the wife of the late and wealthy founder of the Mr. Natural Food Company that was sold to Nabisco for $23 billion last year. Mrs. Gretch lives waterfront, just two doors down from Van der Klerk.

"This is the most outrageous tampering with nature I've ever heard of," Mrs. Gretch said. "The village may not have had on its books a law against the importation of South African lions but it was just a loophole. Cougars are illegal, mountain lions are illegal, we are just lucky that nobody got killed.



Now I've checked the books and I see it's not illegal to bring deer into North Haven and it's my intention to restore this outrageous tampering with the natural scheme of things. I am in the next forty-eight hours going to round up, tranquilize and bring back to North Haven from the Adirondacks, seven hundred replacement deer for those who have died in this incredible carnage."

When asked how she intended to accomplish this, Mrs. Gretch said that she had already arranged for the rental of twenty-eight, sixteen wheel, Mayflower size moving vans. She already had twenty-eight drivers to man them and over eighty members of her organization, Saving the Trees and Other Animals Society, who are placing themselves at her disposal to get the job done.

"We have an almost an endless supply of deer in the Adirondacks," she said. "We are in this fight to the finish."

A spokesman for Hans Van der Klerk said that if more deer were brought in, the lions would be brought back. An official for the Village of North Haven, who did not wish to be identified, said that Van der Klerk is as stubborn as Gretch and so this battle of wills may go on for some time.

"The village is in the process of drafting an ordinance denying entry to both deer not born here and lions not born here. Once we decide on the wording of an ordinance, it has to be published in a newspaper and a public hearing held after thirty days. If it passes, whether we have deer in North Haven or not, may depend upon who has the upper hand at the time we pass the law," the source said. •

Local Trouble

Nothing To Do With Diamonds, Limousines, Champagne, Furs, Picassos Or Helicopters

By Dan Rattiner

The sort of trouble people get themselves into in the Hamptons in the wintertime is a whole different ballgame from the sort of trouble people get themselves into in the summertime.

In the summertime, someone gets in trouble for landing a helicopter illegally in their backyard, for filming a scene in a movie on the Village Green without a permit or for trying and failing to manipulate the silver market. One time some years ago in the summer, a man pretended to buy stocks for his friends at low prices, then pocketed the money. In jail, fellow prisoners overheard him on the jailhouse phone, "selling" still more stocks to friends. That got him put away still longer.

As for the wintertime, here are some items in the news from a week ago.

In Amagansett, a white van was seen weaving back and forth over the centerline at 2 in the morning on Saturday. The police pulled the van over and ticketed the driver, Joan Stefanidis, forty-four, for reckless driving and then, when she couldn't manage the sobriety test, for driving while intoxicated, they took her down to the police station, accompanied by her boyfriend, Matthew Lavis, thirty-seven, where they decided to lock Ms. Stefanidis up for the night.

A struggle ensued, during which she cursed and screamed and managed to kick one officer in the groin.

At 4:45, just over two and a half hours later, police noticed a white van on Main Street in East Hampton, weaving over the centerline and pulled it over. This time, they found Matthew Lavis driving, and after he too flunked the sobriety test, they charged him with driving while intoxicated and brought him down to the police station, where he was put into a jail cell alongside that of his girlfriend.

They also charged Lavis with third degree aggrevated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, since a phone call revealed his licence had been suspended. In the morning, both these people were arraigned, made bail, and were released.

That same night, out in Montauk, the manager of the Montauk Manor called the police to say that a couple staying in one of the rooms was having a terrible argument and waking up the other guests. Police arrived to find Helayne Flint, thirty-five, intoxicated, crouched under a table, sobbing. She said she and her husband had indeed argued, that they had come out to Montauk to spend the weekend because it was her birthday and he had just left, slamming the door behind him and driving off. Police put out a call for the man.

Mrs. Flint, meanwhile, told police that they should search the room, because they might find something interesting belonging to her husband. She seemed eager for this to happen. Police escorted her out into the hall, and then did a complete search but found nothing. Mrs. Flint was then brought back into the room, was told they had found nothing, and she said they should search again. This time, right on the floor, they found a plastic bag of cocaine and another plastic bag of marijuana.

At this point, Mr. Flint was picked up on the Montauk Highway in East Hampton driving back to New York. By phone, the police told him what they had found in the room. He said they weren't his, that he knew nothing about this, that it was a setup.

Now the police placed Mrs. Flint under arrest, which made her very angry. A struggle ensued, during which she cursed and screamed and managed to kick one officer in the groin. Eventually subdued, she was taken out to the police car, still struggling, where, in spite of being handcuffed in the back seat, she managed to kick a dent in the metal cage that separates the front and back seats. She did fail, however, though she tried mightily, to kick out the glass windows.

Once at the police station, Mrs. Flint caused further damage, kicking still another officer in the groin. Eventually, she was wrestled into a lockup, where she spent the night, not far from Joann Stefanidis and Matthew Lavis.

In the morning, Mrs. Flint was charged with two accounts of second degree assault, resisting arrest, criminal possession of a controlled substance and unlawful marijuana possession. She made bail and was released.

In Southampton Town, meanwhile, there was the trial of Stacy Kaufman. Kaufman, who is a lawyer, had been accused of second degree aggravated harrassment by a well known political figure in town, Marion Boden. Boden told police that Kaufman called her up and, referring to an upcoming meeting that both women would shortly attend, told her "Better hope I don't bring a gun. This is not a threat. This is a fact."

'FREED WILLY!' WHALE FINALLY SEES SEA

By BILL HOFFMANN

The hard-luck star of "Free Willy" finally has been spouting from his submarine pen and is happily splashing around on a large bay off Iceland.

It's the first taste of freedom for Keiko, the lovable killer whale who captivated the hearts of kids in three movies.

Keiko got his new home after two decades in captivity. Longtime Whitecrest Bay offers the powerful beast an area 20 times larger than the old harbor a young man that grew into close to three

Whale Freed (Again!)

The Idea Of Freeing Willie Is A Good News Story Even If It Never Happens

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes here in the media business, I think there is just one story and it keeps going round and round. Last fall for instance, I was in Albuquerque, New Mexico and as is my habit when I travel, I watch local TV and read the local newspapers to see what's going on. In the New Mexico Statesman, I read an article about Keiko, the five-ton killer whale, who starred in all the Free Willy movies that were made during the 1990s. You may recall that in real life Keiko's troubles were almost exactly the same as those of those of the made up Willy. Keiko's was in a shabby amusement park in Mexico. Keiko does tricks and leads an unhappy life until freed by a proverbial knight in shining armor.

In the case of Willy in the movie, the knight in shining armor is an eleven year old boy, who outfoxes the evil amusement park owners to lead Willy back to the sea. In the case of Keiko, John McCormick, a man who made hundreds of millions of dollars co-founding Microsoft along with Bill Gates, took on that role.

McCormick purchased Keiko and had him brought up to Oregon where he was placed in an aquarium and nursed back to health and supposedly prepared for release into the wild. The trouble was that Keiko wouldn't go along with the script being urged on him. Little fish would be introduced into his environment and instead of eating them, which is what wild whales would do, he made friends with them. He still would only eat if the fish were killed by humans and taken out and cut up and served to him from a bucket.

THE YACHT RACE THAT WAS ON TV UNTIL AMERICA LOST

By Dan Rattiner

The biggest yachting event of the year ended last week in New Zealand not with a bang but a whimper. You may recall watching on television these magnificent multimillion dollar yachts race one against the other tacking way and that, one crossing in front of the bow of the other, charging downwind toward a mark with the wind at their back.

I personally think that the yachting races collectively known as the America's Cup which occur every two or three years for about a month are among the most beautiful spectacles in the world. The yachts, with three of four sails and a crew of a dozen, cut through the water with astounding grace. The captains at the helm have to use all their skill to anticipate wind shifts, tides and wave conditions to win against their opponents.

Entries came from all over the world, from Japan, France, England, Italy, Australia and of course from New Zealand, whose sleek black ships were defending the cup they won three years ago. The U.S. had put together three entries, each one a rich man's toy, collectively spending about $50 million for the effort.

That one of the American teams made the finals in the Louis Vuitton Cup, the Cup awarded to the team that wins the right to meet the champion of New Zealanders was big news. The team had not been the favorite among the three American entries but it was sailed brilliantly by Paul Cayard and in the end, after almost a dozen races, would meet the Italian boat for the right to challenge New Zealand. For about two weeks approximately twenty million stayed up to watch Paul Cayard and the Americans against Italy. Though the Italian boat was at one point ahead three victories to one, needing two more to win, Cayard, on successive days, seemed to find ways to put the American boat in an extra gear and pulled even.

There was a very exciting conclusive race. The American and Italian boats seemed almost evenly matched, the Italians faster upwind, the Americans faster downwind. In the end, when the Italians won by a few seconds, people thought it was pretty neat.

American teams have been fighting for the America's Cup for 140 years. The first time Italy decided to enter was nine years ago. And for the first three of those years they finished dead last. One of the TV commentators on ESPN2 remembered those days.

Keiko remained in the Oregon Aquarium for two years and even after the expense of almost ten million of Mr. McCormick's dollars, appeared to be making no progress what so ever in moving in the direction of the wild.

The article I read therefore was that finally, in frustration, Keiko was being removed from Oregon and taken to a new dolphin pen that was being prepared for him in a cove in Iceland. He'd have more room to swim around and though he would still be in an enclosure, it would be a good bit larger, three football fields long as a matter of fact. Also, there were at least the sounds and the sights of other aquatic creatures that were naturally in abundance outside the pen where there hadn't been any in Oregon. He would still be fed by scientists in lab coats, throwing in cut up pieces of fish, however, and nobody was willing to predict where this was gonna go from here.

Inspired by this story, I did what I've been doing for the last forty years, even on vacation, which was sit down and write it up for Dan's Papers. A common belief, that Keiko like the mythical Willy, had been returned to the wild was not true. He was still penned up and being fed from a bucket, but now it was in Iceland instead of Oregon.

For some reason, I never got around to publishing this article in Dan's Papers last October. In fact, the months went by and it wasn't until March 3, just three weeks ago, that the piece finally appeared. That Keiko had been moved to

"You could always tell when the Italian boat was about to come about," he said. "The captain and the crew would flick their cigarettes over the side."

Those lackadaisical days for the Italians are long gone, however. The Italian owners of their entry, wealthy industrialists from Milan, spent almost $60 million to make their boat the best afloat. They may have been a Cinderella team, but there is something to the adage in yacht racing that the more you spend, the faster you go. The Italians sailed beautifully and after an entire afternoon of that final race crossed the finish line twenty-seven seconds ahead.

Within hours after the Italian victory, however, all transmissions from Auckland Harbor in New Zealand seemed to cease, as far as I could tell. There were no more reports in the newspaper and no more live telecasts. And I suppose with the Americans out of it, one could at least understand this decision to drop the whole America's Cup into a big, black media hole. But I for one was curious to know what happened after that.

For all the rest of you who might have wondered, I'd like to report that in the first race of the head to head best out of nine competition between the New Zealanders and the Italians, the New Zealanders just about ran away with the race. They were faster going into the wind, faster cutting across the wind and faster going downwind. They won the first race by two minutes and they repeated this performance the next day. As a matter of fact, they won all five races straight there in Auckland Harbor, their home port. Since the Americans and Italians had been so evenly matched, it was almost a saving grace that the Italians had nosed out the Americans because now the humiliation of losing it all in the face of a superior enemy would not reflect on us.

The New Zealanders have been practicing racing in their harbor all year long, it's true, but they spent only a half of what the Americans spent on their entry and one tenth of the money compared to the Italians, who actually spent more than one dollar per person for their entire country. It was all for nothing.

The America's Cup remained in America, either at the New York Yacht Club or the Newport Yacht Club for nearly 140 years until it finally lost in a controversial final against the Australians in the late 1980s. It's been back since, but now New Zealand has won it and defended it and it doesn't look like they are going to give it up so easily.

The Italians, meanwhile, might go back to flicking cigarettes when they are ready to come about. •

The Ultimate Penalty

East Hampton Producer Vic Teich On Reconciliation Over The Death Penalty

By Jerry Cimisi

"After I completed East Hampton From the Ice Age to 1998 A.D., I was looking for another project, wanting to do another dramatic story. I was struck by the number of people being released from death row based on DNA evidence."

Vic Teich, longtime president of the Public Access Producers Association at LTV, and a retired teacher of English (he taught in New York City high schools) was commenting on his segue from the documentary he had produced on the history of East Hampton to his current project on the death penalty.

Mr. Teich produced the hour-long documentary on the history of East Hampton for the town's 350th anniversary in 1998. The documentary was eventually shown on Metro Arts Channel 18, a PBS station. The documentary is currently on sale at East Hampton's BookHampton, with proceeds going to the East Hampton Library's Long Island Collection.

Now he has turned to an issue not local but national – indeed, universal. And approached from a point of view that has been rarely explored. Mr. Teich has been interviewing individuals who have lost loved ones as victims to murder; and yet, these grief-stricken people are against the death penalty.

Vic Teich said, "I read a newspaper article about a man in New Hamsphire, Renny Cushing, whose father was murdered and yet he was utterly opposed to the death penalty. As member of the New Hampshire legislature he had fought against the death penalty."

Mr. Teich went to Cambridge, Massachusetts to meet with Cushing, who is now the Executive Director of Murder Victims Families for Reconciliation.

"They have hundreds of members. They advance the simple thesis – and this is what I am advancing in my documentary – that a civilized society does not use the death penalty. It does not deter violence, it creates violence. And it demeans everyone who is involved in the execution.

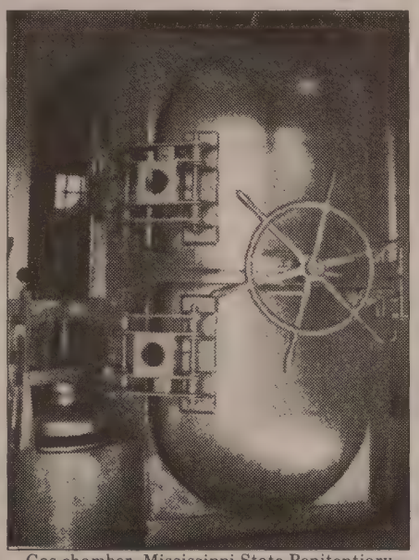
"The majority of the nations in the world – 120 countries – do not have the death penalty. None of the western democracies, except the United States."

There is nothing more basic than life and death and the issue of the death penalty has been a controversial one for decades. Through the 1970s and '80s, America suffered an enormous increase in crime. In the 1990s, partly in answer to that, there has been not only an increase in executions, but a reinstituting of the death penalty in states where it had not been in effect for some time. New York is a case in point. When current Governor George Pataki defeated three-time Governor Mario Cuomo in 1994, one of his major platforms was the reinstitution of the death penalty.

"Like a lot of people I was ambivalent about the death penalty," said Teich. That ambivalence allowed a certain distance between oneself and an execution. "I suppose it came down to they're getting rid of some terrible person somewhere without me being involved."

But Teich's contact with individuals who, despite their own personal losses, were opposed to the death penalty, ended his ambivalence.

"In Florida, SueZann Bosler father's was murdered and she herself was left for dead by the killer. She recovered, the murderer was caught and tried and found guilty. Now this is very interesting: at the trial she testified for the prosecution; at the sentencing she testified for the defense, against the death penalty – and she was able to convince the jury to vote against it.



Gas chamber, Mississippi State Penitentiary

"I just came back from Michigan where I videotaped Ron Callen. In Michigan, there is no death penalty, but his mother was murdered in Ohio, which has a death penalty. When the man who killed his mother was being sentenced, the prosecution asked Callen if he wanted the death penalty and he said, No.

The mother of another Michigan resident, Sally Peck was murdered. Teich said, "She told me that there is only pain involved if you seek revenge. She sat on a panel discussion about the death penalty, with people for and against, and she said she felt that those who were against the death penalty were individuals who were more at peace with themselves."

Teich related the story of Bud Welch, owner a gas station in Oklahoma City. "His daughter was killed in the bombing of the federal building there in 1995. He said his first reaction was to get hold of the bomber and strangle him with his bare hands. Then one day he saw Timothy McVeigh's father on TV and said to himself, 'We're in the same shoes.' Now he is involved in trying to get McVeigh's sentence commuted to life imprisonment."

Teich is going to Mississipi to interview Donald A. Cabana, a former warden who oversaw executions but who turned against the death penalty and published Death at Midnight, Confessions of an Executioner to detail just why he had turned away from the ultimate punishment.

A prison administrator in Massachusetts, Mississippi, Florida and Missouri, Cabana writes, "I spent most of my career as a prison administrator convinced of the need for capital punishment." But: "For those few, however, who are actually authorized by the state to kill another human being, the death penalty becomes a chilling exposé of the darkest emotions of the citizenry... Capital Punishment exacts a toll on those who must carry it out."

Describing the chair into which the condemned person is strapped in the gas chamber at the Mississippi State Penitentiary in Parchman, Cabana writes, "The straps are aged and worn, their cracks offering silent testimony to the struggles of three dozen men against them since 1955... Beneath the chair rests an innocuous dish into which cyanide crystals are poured. A lever located outside the chamber drops the dish of crystals into a waiting receptacle containing sulfuric acid and distilled water. These are the ingredients that create the lethal gas."

As warden, it was Cabana's job to count out the cyanide capsules. And it was Cabana who gave the order to the executioner (who received $500 for his work) to press the lever that would drop the pellets. "But I discovered that my hand was on the lever as well," Cabana writes.

"There is nothing commonplace about walking a healthy young man to a room, strapping him into a chair and coldly, methodically, killing him."

In prose all the more chilling for its straightforward style, Cabana describes watching the condemned prisoner gasp for breath as the gas overwhelms him. His advice to the condemned man had been to "breathe deep," so death would come more quickly.

Since Cabana had overseen executions, Mississippi has switched to lethal injection. Whether that has reduced the suffering of the condemned is arguable, but it leaves unchanged the fact of the death penalty itself.

Teich said, "I think most people in the U.S. are for the death penalty. It's carried out at in the middle of the night, carried out by somebody else."

Teich addedd, "A Chief Justice at the Florida State Supreme Court said that if you were a participant in the carrying out of the death penalty it would make you feel differently. Whenever an execution was scheduled the judge had to be at his desk at 6 a.m. to receive a call from the D.A. asking the judge if there is a stay. When the judge says there is no stay, the D. A. then has to inform the warden. The judge said it made him a participant and it shook him up. It transformed him from someone who didn't want to know about an execution to someone helping to throw the switch."

Teich hopes that his documentary will be shown on various cable networks and is putting together a demo tape to raise funds. He sees the budget as about $125,000 – not big money in terms of TV projects, but certainly the most expensive project he has worked on to date.

This is a topic that appears will suffer continuing controversy. Last month Texas (the state with the highest number of executions in recent years) put to death a grandmother. And just last week, atorneys representing the defendants, Islamic fundamentalists, who are charged with being part of the conspiracy that blew up two U.S. Embassies in Africa in August, 1998, are petitioning the Department of Justice and the State Department not to seek the death penalty for these men. Their reasoning is that putting to death anyone convicted of these crimes will only add to the belief of many Islamic fundamentalists that the United States is barbaric and the condemned will become martyrs.

Just before an execution, a condemned man refused Cabana's offer of a tranquilizer and said, "I want you to know just what you are doing when you execute me." Cabana came to realize just what an execution meant: the violence of revenge instead of the reconcilation of healing. Have the rest of us faced this final outcome of our justice? •

This harrassment had supposedly taken place in August, and in September, a judge had offered Ms. Kaufman a plea bargain, whereby the charges against her would be dropped in exchange for her agreeing to stay away from Ms. Boden for six months. Ms. Kaufman refused, saying she would prefer to have her day in court. And so, a jury was selected, the trial held, and on Friday afternoon, a verdict returned of guilty as charged. Ms. Kaufman could spend up to a year in jail, or three years on probation. She could also lose her law license.

Midway through the trial, there was a fifteen minute recess, so Ms. Kaufman could run upstairs for an interview with the Town Board. She is being considered for a vacancy on the Town Planning Board.

Ms. Kaufman is well known to the Town Board. She ran for Supervisor in 1997 on the ticket of a splinter political party – the Southampton Preservationist Party – after being turned down by both the Democratic and Southampton Party committees for the nomination. The following summer, at a protest, she had seated herself in and refused to move out of the empty chair of the Town Supervisor in the Town Board Meeting Room, thereby recording her opposition to the Town Board's approval of a golf course application. Police had to be brought in, and, as she clapped her hands over her ears, shut her eyes and began singing Christmas carols, forcibly remove her.

Now, during this recess, Ms. Kaufman told the Town Board that she was aware she had had run ins with each of them but she was sure things could be ironed out, and that she would provide a necessary "diversity" to the planning board since she was a Democrat, a Jew and a lesbian.

The Town Board told her they would think about it, and Ms. Kaufman returned downstairs to her trial.

After the verdict, one of the jurors, Kimberley Czaplick, told a reporter from the Southampton Press that "she (Ms. Kaplan) could have recanted right away and said she was sorry, that she didn't mean it and it slipped out. But she didn't. Her whole manner was that she knew what she was saying. And then to come back and tell (Ms. Boden) that it wasn't just a threat, that it was a fact. That did it for me."

After the verdict, Ms. Kaufman spoke to this same reporter and said that she felt she hade been convicted "because it was close to 5 p.m. and the jury wanted to go home and forget about all this. (Also), conditions in that courtroom are horrible. It's hot and uncomfortable down there and I think they blamed me for all that."

Ms. Boden said she thought Ms. Kaufman should get help.

Ms. Kaufman said she would not appeal. Judge Burke will pronounce the sentence in about a week. •

Paul Salmon Entrepreneur

By Dan Rattiner

One of the Hamptons newest young homeowners is Paul Salmon, who this past October closed on a house on Jobs Lane in Sagaponack. I know this because Paul's name turned up in the bi-weekly real estate column we run in Dan's Papers that documents all house and land sales in the Hamptons in excess of a million dollars.

"We recently made a contest out of it," I told him. "The person who spends the most money is declared the winner and gets a prize."

"What's that?" Paul asked.

"It's a ten percent off discount coupon on any one of the books that I've written. It's available at our office in Bridgehampton. Good for thirty days."

Paul Salmon, a handsome man in his mid-thirties, has a sense of humor, a lot of poise and many friends. He's gone into partnership with several of them in four different business, one of which is Joe's Pub at the Joseph Papp Public Theatre in Manhattan.

Where I'm talking to Paul, however, is neither in the Hamptons nor in New York City, but in the restaurant bar of one of his other ventures, the Rock House Hotel in Jamaica, a legend on that island originally made famous by frequent visits from the Rolling Stones in the 1970s.

We are drinking beer outdoors at a table on one of the patios overlooking the swimming pool. Beyond that is the beach and beyond that, the sunset. It is six p.m. The restaurant, behind us, has just opened. Lights are going on in the twenty-four thatched huts that lead down to the ocean.

"I bought this place with two of my friends back in 1994," Paul says. "I had known them from my college days in Melbourne, Australia, where we had all grown up. We'd worked at a three level disco in the city called Inflation. Fabian was the manager and owner, Lisa had worked there and I'd kept in touch with them over the years.

"Fabian had gone into the restaurant business, Lisa had gotten an anthropology degree at UCLA and was fascinated with Jamaican culture. The culture on this island is utterly unique.

"I'll give you an example. Lisa had been our point person down here. I was working for an investment banking firm in Manhattan and she was looking for properties for us for a number of years. Two fell through and then we were able to make a deal for the Rock House. It was owned by about fifteen U.S. and German investors and because there was so many of them, nobody had a real interest in keeping it up. It was running down.

"When we bought it we thought that, given its history, if we fixed it up and expanded it, we could capture this growing international market, mostly couples I'd say from twenty-five to forty, who have a designer awareness and come to Jamaica. And so we got another friend of ours, a Frenchmen who had transplanted to Australia named Jeanri Moran, who is an architect, and he designed the place, doubling its capacity adding the oceanfront swimming pool and putting in this big restaurant.

"Right where we're sitting here there was this big old tree that just had to come down and so we had all the workmen on the site and two of them got an electric saw out and were cutting the tree one day and each time they got deeper and removed the saw, they'd open a bottle of rum and splash it on the cut and rub it in. I wondered about this. They didn't finish the tree that day, and the next day two other men, completed the cutting but didn't use the rum. The tree came down but one of the cutters hurt himself, not badly, with the saw and was bleeding and we had to wrap it in a bandage. And at that point all the workmen put down their tools and said they wouldn't work here anymore and left.

"We were dumbfounded. It turned out that the first workmen had rubbed the rum into the tree, apologizing to it for having to remove it and when the other workman was injured on the second day, it was proof positive that there was a spirit in that tree and it had been offended.

"What we had to do to make things right, and we did, was to get a goat, sacrifice it, spill its blood all around to cleanse the area and then invite the workmen back for a big feast and party. The next day they were all back at work."

Paul was born and raised in Melbourne, Australia. He talks with an accent not far from that of Crocodile Dundee, went to Catholic school and grew up living in a suburban house in moderate circumstances. He has two older brothers, both of whom have remained in Melbourne, one working in the audio department for a TV station and the other building one of a kind furniture. His mother was a mom and a part-time co-owner of a decorating store and his father was a wool buyer for a British firm. Employed by Woolcombers in England, he traveled a great deal and told Paul fascinating stories about the outside world. Paul decided he wanted to see that world.

In Catholic high school, Paul played cricket, tennis and Australian rules football and commuted to the school at first by train and later by tram because as he said, "It went past more girls schools."

Paul was shy growing up in high school; he stayed out of the limelight and just wanted to fit in. At Melbourne University he got dual bachelors degrees, one in arts and the other in commerce. During his studies he decided to take off for a year and go around the world. To do that, he worked six months as an insurance clerk in Melbourne, living at home, and when he got his war chest together, he went to Bangkok, Hong Kong, across Asia and through Europe where he traveled around on a Eurail pass, came to New York and fell in love with it, and, running out of money, stayed in New York at the YMCA on Vanderbilt Avenue by Grand Central Station. Finally, dead broke but with his airline ticket, he took the plane twenty-five hours straight home.

"My goal when I got home was to get back," he said. "I saw an ad in the paper from the Arthur Anderson Accounting firm, based in Chicago that said, 'Join Arthur Anderson and see the world.' And so, I went to their Melbourne office and they hired me in the management consulting division. Immediately though, I saw it was a wrong decision. It had a elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand why if people don't know the truth, they invent it.

When I returned to San Jose del Cabo, the small village in Mexico where I live in the wintertime, I was informed there was a rumor among the children that I had died. There I was walking and talking but word had it that I was dead. The daughter of our local Port Captain had invented the story saying that she had heard it from her father. Her father said that he had never heard a word. I was a little surprised but no harm was done.

Even before I returned to the Hamptons I was told that there was a rumor that I had sold the Elaine Benson Gallery. Interesting that I seem to be the last one to know about it. I laughed and asked who I supposedly sold it to and for how much. For a minute I wondered who would start a rumor so far from the truth. Obviously it doesn't matter and now that I'm here, I'm having fun finding out what people have heard. In one case someone told me I had sold to a gallery in Sag Harbor. Another story had me selling to my friend Enid. I spoke to Enid in Florida today and we had a big laugh over it. The gallery was said to have had a real-estate, for sale, sign. Someone has a good imagination.

When I first came to live in the wintertime in San Jose del Cabo, I found gossip to be so much a part of life that it began to fascinate me. There were no satellite TVs, at the time, and almost none of the ex-patriot community went off to work. There was nothing better to do than spin a yarn. Gossip was a full time pastime.

The Hamptons, off season, seem to fall into the same category. When left with too little input, just create your own version of reality. There are a lot of creative people around here after all.

If you've heard any really good stories about my recent sale, I'd love to hear them. It reminds me of the old game, whispering down the lane.

There is an enormous telephone handset in my mother's collection of memorabilia. It says, "Three ways to spread news in the Hamptons. Telegraph, telephone, and tell Elaine."

Well, tell Kimberly

TWENTY YEARS AGO

"Rollerskating and Drinking in the Discos of America"

March 28, 1980

Some of our local disco owners have been investigating the idea of having roller disco. Dancing on roller skates has become a big fad in California, and it seemed to our disco owners that it might make a nice change from the normal disco routine, whatever that is. The trouble is that the State Liquor Authority has made a ruling that you can't serve liquor and have rollerskating at the same time. You can have one or you can have the other, but not both. Too dangerous. But the disco owners can't make much money without –serving booze.

The feeling at this newspaper is that the New York State bureaucracy has really missed the boat on this one. Certainly there are those irresponsible disco-goers who strap on their rollerskates, have too much to drink and then careen around the floor endangering the lives and limbs of those around them. There are drunken auto drivers too. But just as there are a whole lot more safe drivers than there are drunken drivers, we would bet there would be a whole lot more safe rollerskaters than there are drunken rollerskaters. Why spoil the party because of the behavior of a few?

What we think is that the State of New York should allow rollerskating at discos, but they should make the rollerskaters buy licenses. Rollerskaters could then have a glass of wine or one drink or two, but they would be very careful not to get themselves drunk because, as the signs around the dance floor would say, SPEEDERS LOSE LICENSES.

Not only could the authorities keep busy in issuing the licenses, stamping them, filling out the forms and renewing them, they could also have their own little police force. At every disco, there could be uniformed officers complete with souped up rollerskates, sirens and flashing light hats, who could circle the disco floor keeping order among the dancers and pulling the disorderly over to the side. Speeders could be issued citations. Drunken rollerskaters could be taken in. The injured could be quickly attended to.

A good rollerskater cop outfitted with ticket book, two-way radio and a drunkometer could do big business at a roller disco and leave the world a safer place for the rest of us.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

"In Jail for the Sake of Art"

March 28, 1980

One of the developments of the 1970's in the art world has been something called "Body Art." In this new art form, the artist puts himself into his work, usually in some vulgar or violent way, to either shock the viewer or make him focus on the artist as a personality. For instance, in the past, "Body Art" has consisted of leaps from a second story window. There was an occasion where Chris Burden, a California sculptor, confronted his audience by nailing himself to a Volkswagen another time, by shooting himself in the arm.

Thus it was actually no surprise, last year, when a New York artist named Sam Hsieh announced that he would jail himself for a period of one year.

"I plan to do a one-year performance piece to begin on December 31, 1978," Hsieh wrote to the art world. "I shall seal myself in my studio, in solitary confinement inside a cell-room measuring 11 feet, 6 inches by 9 feet, 8 inches. I shall NOT converse, read, write, listen to the radio or watch television until I unseal myself on December 30, 1979."

Sam Hsieh lives in a studio apartment in the Tribeca section of Manhattan directly above One's Disco on Hudson Street. In a corner of this apartment, Hsieh built a small cell exactly the dimensions that he said he would. It had bars all around and looked like nothing so much as an old fashioned Village lock-up. Then, Hsieh put on the clothes he planned to wear for his

The Sheltered Islander

Observations of a New Islander #98
It's a Grand Old Flag

When George M. Cohan first penned the words to the song, "It's a Grand Old Flag," he called the song, "It's a Grand Old Rag," but, there was so much public hue and cry over the song title, he quickly changed it to, "It's a Grand Old Flag." George M. gave us many patriotic songs which we sing only in our heads and listen to at school concerts.

I was repairing an American Flag recently for a WWII vet. He flies the flag every day and could barely part with it long enough to let me repair it. It took me four hours to do the repair. When he came to pick it up, I refused payment, which shocked him. "I didn't think anyone felt that way about the flag anymore," he said.

I think he reflects a general feeling that WWII and Korean era people have that subsequent generations just aren't patriotic. That we are just too jaded after Watergate, the Arms for Hostages scandal, the impeachment of President Clinton, etc.

I think I can put that fear to rest. While it's true that we are more aware of mistakes we've made and problems we have to fix (like any other nation), it is also true that we are still fiercely patriotic although some only think of it when they feel that little lump in their throat when they hear the Star Spangled Banner.

We have survived and mended the gaping rift left by the Vietnam War (don't call it a "conflict" in front of me). I saw that during the Iranian Hostage crisis, 44 Americans held in captivity held the attention of every American. You could ask anyone, "Any news on them?" and they knew exactly who you were talking about.

The politicians don't fool the public as much as they used to. The Gulf War was the first time this nation made the first strike. President Bush said we had to do it to protect our Kuwati friends from Sadam Hussein. Oh, please... we don't have any Kuwati "friends." We do, however, have Kuwati oil.

We were there to protect our fuel line and every one knew it. If only Africa had oil, they'd be high on our "friends" list too. It shames me to think how fast we'd help the African nations if we had something financial to gain.

We have been made wise. We know a man can be a great president and a lousy husband. President Harding's pregnant mistress sat on the podium during his inauguration, only a few chairs from Mrs. Harding. President Eisenhower had "companions" wherever he was stationed. President Johnson had a string of encounters and President Kennedy was a testerone tour de force. The truth is, under Clinton, we have the lowest unemployment and lowest inflation since WWII. Still, he's a lousy husband. (And how Slutika Lewinsky holds her head up in public is completely beyond me, she should be on the national list of persona non grata.) One of my heroes, Barry Goldwater, said it best, "If they removed all the Senators who drank too much, gambled too much and cheated on their spouses, the only Senators left would be the eight women."

Barry had a firm grip on the importance of separation from Church and State that is causing so much trouble now. He didn't object to gays in the military, "I think they only have to shoot straight," or abortion rights, "I'm personally opposed, but I think it's up to a woman and her doctor." Sen. John McCain lost his party's nomination because he too, is fed up with right wing fundamentalists trying to steer policy. If Churches want to be political forces, they should pay taxes like everyone else. Now the Republicans are stuck with beady eyed Bush. Another rich boy who evaded service. At least McCain and Gore are Viet Vets.

You see, it's the era of the Viet Vet now. Our turn at the wheel. And although we are more critical of the government than our earlier counterparts, we are no less patriotic. I served as an Army Psych nurse for seven years (that's what qualified me to work for Dan's). I will tell you from the heart, every serviceman coming home, who hit the tarmac in Guam to refuel for Hawaii, was looking for one sight to fill his eyes, the Stars and Stripes Forever.

The flag means home to anyone who's been overseas, in service or just on vacation. Our flag

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival

(featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here)

March 25th ~ Death Trap
Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve star in a now-you-see-it-now-you-don't cat and mouse game that's as playful as a devastatingly sharp battle-axe. It was directed by Sidney Lumet.

April 1st ~ Rocket Gibralter
An ailing father entertains his large family in his Sagaponack house for his 77th birthday celebration. Wonderfully heart-warming barely describes this film and Burt Lancaster's sensitive performance.

April 8th ~ Annie Hall
The epitome of Woody Allen at his very best. It won four Oscars, including Best Picture. Hilarious and thoughtfully melancholy at times... no one can resist this movie~ or should.

April 15th ~ David And Lisa
The gentle exploration of a mentally disturbed young couple, groping for places in the world~ remains one of the best films on the subject. Performances by the lead couple are marvelous.

April 22nd ~ Last Summer
Exceptionally strong story of the trials of teenagers playing out explosive games of sexual awakening and status on local beaches. Provocative and jarring, its original X rating has been edited for an R.

April 29th ~ Masquerade
A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.

May 6th ~ The Fan
Lauren Bacall stars as a Broadway star stalked by a psychotic admirer. Also featured is James Garner. Be cautioned! This is a tough, exploitive shocker.. .not for the faint of heart.

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse
Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens
This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onasis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

is unique in design and downright beautiful. It should be seen more. Not just in front of buildings and folded in those heart rending triangular boxes on the mantle.

It's still a Grand Old Flag. It represents a complex and evolving people. Conflictual with each other, but when threatened, will close ranks faster than you can imagine. Abraham Lincoln said it best, "The American people will get as good a government as they are willing to work for and as bad a government as they are willing to stand for."

Keep recycling, keep voting, try to increase your involvement with government. And don't hesitate to display a flag. It doesn't mean you are conservative or liberal. It doesn't mean you're taking a stand for or against anything. It means you love being an American, and in the words of Chris Rock, "Hey, ain't nothin' wrong wit dat." •

Iceland almost six months earlier didn't, it seemed to me, matter much. The story was the thing that would capture the measure of the king, as someone once said. Well, it was near enough.

The day after my story appeared in Dan's Papers on March 3, I was shocked to read the story on page nine of the New York Post, which headlined 'Freed Willy!' Whale Finally Sees Sea. My worst nightmare is that I hold an article for a period of time and during that time something dramatic happens to render it completely out of date. Apparently, the caged door had been opened in Iceland and Willy had been let go. But, no, a closer reading of the story revealed that all it was reporting was that Keiko had been taken from Oregon and now was up in Iceland. It was impossible to come to almost any other conclusion than that a reporter or editor at the Post had read my article in Dan's Papers and decided to rewrite it still again.

"The hard luck star of Free Willy finally has been sprung from his inhumane pen and is happily splashing around in a large bay off Iceland." the article began. "It's the first taste of freedom for Keiko, the five-ton killer whale who captured the hearts of kids in three hit movies." The article was written by Bill Hoffman and I've been tempted to call him to confirm the obvious, which was that they were reporting as news something that had happened almost half a year ago that I had read about in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

The more I read the article however, the more convinced I became that it was not Bill Hoffman who had read the article in Dan's Papers. What I think instead, is that an editor at the New York Post read the article in Dan's Papers, and in a brief encounter with his reporter, had assigned the story to him. "You know that killer whale that played Free Willy in that movie? Well it looks like they finally freed him from that aquarium up in Oregon." I imagined the assignment got garbled as Hoffman then probably made several phone calls to the scientists up in Iceland who, a) were probably amazed that somebody thought that Keiko had just been released and b) were happy to tell him what he wanted to hear.

"Children around the world truly wanted Keiko to be free," said John Michel Coustau, of Ocean Futures and Ocean Wildlife Group. "To their outcry, Keiko is being given the opportunity to be a wild whale again."

No mention of the fact that Ocean Future and John McCormick have been trying for more than three years to do exactly that without any success.

Also, in the article was a quote that made me doubt my sanity. Apparently between Friday and Saturday, the story about Keiko's move from to Iceland had also been picked up by the BBC. There have been numerous occasions when the BBC has retold stories that have appeared in Dan's Papers.

" 'Keiko will be given plenty of time to adjust to the new circumstances,' sea life expert Hallur Hallson told the BBC, Hoffman dutifully reported."

What I'm beginning to wonder is if the article I read in the New Mexico Statesman hadn't been seen by a Statesman reporter in the San Francisco Chronicle, who saw it on Sixty Minutes, who picked it up from the New York Post. As I said, there could be just one story and it keeps going round. • confinement: a white shirt and pants with the name SAM and the number 93078 stenciled over the right breast pocket, and the name HSIEH and the number 92979 stenciled over the left.

The numbers, you might have guessed correspond to the dates that Sam planned to arrive and depart the cell, but they also gave him the appearance of being a convict.

Then Sam went into his cell and an attorney put a seal on the doors and bars behind him. One year later, when the doors were once again opened, these seals were fully intact.

What had this slight, 29 year old artist done during his confinement? Very little as a matter of fact. Mostly, he just sat and thought. At meal times, a friend of his named Cheng came around and brought him either a sandwich (at breakfast time) or a Chinese takeout meal at dinner. He skipped lunch.

A reporter interviewed Hsieh for a New York weekly newspaper.

"'Whenever One's Disco downstairs was open, you could hear the music and the bass quite loudly," the reporter noted. "Didn't that start to drive you crazy?"

"The noise was actually good for me," Sam said. "The songs sounded like mumbling. But for awhile, there was one song I recognized, a Japanese song from my childhood that has been translated into English. So that was one song I could sing along with."

"A lot of people might view this as nothing more than masochism."

"I don't think it was masochistic at all. My art is an expression of my experience, my feelings about life. This piece was meant to convey honesty with myself, guilt feelings and confessions."

"At the end of your year did you feel purified and relieved of your guilt feelings?"

"No. Actually, I felt even worse when I came out of the cage."

So much for that idea. –Dan Rattiner strict code and with its hierarchy I could see the next ten years stretched out in front of me."

Some months later, Paul spoke to a friend from college who urged him to apply for a job in Melbourne with Bankers Trust, a New York based banking company and he went to see them and was hired in the money market division.

"I was with them for twelve years." Paul said. "I spent six months in Melbourne then eighteen months in Sydney and then two years in Hong Kong where I lived in a firm owned apartment on Repulse Bay, was given a car, a club membership where I played a lot of tennis and at work, managed a team of ten people.

"I met a lot of people there from the New York office and after saying politely I'd love the opportunity to go to New York, was transferred there to start up their fixed income and equity arbitrage departments. They put me up at first in a corporate apartment at the Bristol Plaza on Third Avenue and after that, I rented an apartment on Cornelia Street near Sixth Avenue, which I subsequently bought. I worked downtown on Liberty Street, near the World Trade Center and a walk to Wall Street."

Paul was twenty-eight years old.

Exactly what is arbitrage? "Well, the bank would give us capital and we'd take a position in the market, not on the stocks themselves, but on the rate of change in the positions of them, or the relationships between them. I managed the department. I'm not a great trader, but I hired a young team, about my age, come to think of it. I was sort of a coach, we'd work sixty, eighty hours a week sometimes. It was very exciting. And sometimes there were crazy hours. If there was a short term position we were working in the Tokyo or Hong Kong markets, we would be up all night."

"How did you go from the banking business to the restaurant and hotel business?" I asked.

"When I was in banking it occurred to me I had to have a plan B," Paul grinned. "When I was in Melbourne, I always loved the restaurant and hospitality business and had lots of part time jobs going to school in that field. The disco Inflation where I met Fabian and Lisa is one of those places with lots of lights flashing and dancing and so forth. Actually, my first project was this one right here in Jamaica. We'd done market research and it seemed that all the resorts were of two kinds, either big all inclusive and expensive or a local Jamaican product. We thought there was clearly a niche unfulfilled for the most part for a boutique hotel and that's what we were looking for.

"My first trip down here was in 1990. I had just moved to New York and came down to Jamaica on vacation with Lisa and saw a business opportunity. We spoke with Fabian back in Australia who was also interested. We agreed to each contribute to the business and we all brought different skills to the table. Fabian had the hospitality industry experience. Lisa had the Jamiacan knowledge and developed the local contacts and I handled the numbers. We were equal partners."

In 1997, two years after buying the Rock House, Paul became partners with Josh Pickard, who is the owner of Time Cafe, downtown on Layfayette. Paul made a partnership arrangement with him and helped him expand, opening a second Time Cafe uptown on 85th and Broadway. Then in 1998, with Pickard and designer Serge Becker, who is involved in the Bowery Bar and other places, they won the bid to open a performance space and bar at the Joseph Papp Public Theatre; it's called Joe's Pub.

Paul met his wife-to-be at a party at his apartment in 1995. Her name is Aisha Steiner. She went to Sarah Lawrence, has a postgraduate degree in media from NYU and worked for a literacy program for adults on Public Access Television in New York. They have a son Noah who is one year old. Paul and Aisha rented in the Hamptons in Sagaponack on Sagg Main for a number of years, then this past October bought their turn of the century barn on Jobs Lane. "We kind of chill out when we go to the Hamptons," Paul said. "We stay at home, play tennis, go to the beach, visit friends. We're kind of shrimp on the barbie types."

I thought it an extraordinary coincidence running into Paul Salmon in Negril, Jamaica. Cathie and I were down there for a week, enjoying the island. We did not go to Montego Bay or Ocho Rios, the big resort areas on the north, but instead went to Negril, the more laid back village on the western tip and then to the undeveloped jungley south coast where we fell in love with, among other places, the astonishing ocean front restaurant and cottages known as Jake's. We took a boat tour of the black river on the south coast and were introduced to hawks, pelicans, crocodiles, which we fed, and along the route saw several spear fishermen working from row boats who were obtaining their catch by swimming underwater with snorkeling gear and firing at big fish. Our guide noted that several of the spear fishermen had been attacked by crocodiles but though many were scarred and injured, it didn't seem to deter them. We were taken by our driver, Mr. Clue, to the beautiful Y.I. Falls and we swam in the pond into which the falls splashes. As if on cue, we found that if you swim into the falls you come into the cave behind them, just like in the movies.

We visited the Cashoo Ostrich Farm and met the owner, Mr. Mark Panton. The ostriches stood eight feet tall, and though skittish, were so curious that if one person fed them, another could pat them. We also toured several hotels including the Cliff House and the Negril Cabins hotel in Negril. In Negril we stayed at the Coco La Palm Resort Bay Hotel right on the beach and on the South Coast, we stayed at Treasure Beach Hotel, on, oddly enough, Treasure Beach.

We loved Jamaica. The people could not have been friendlier and the hospitality was unparalleled. Taking us down and back was Air Jamaica and you can start your trip right on board because they serve Jamaican lunches and dinners during the flight. •

The Montauk St. Patrick's Day Parade

Under sunny but chilly skies, an estimated 40,000 people showed up in downtown Montauk for the St. Patrick's Day Parade on Sunday, March 18. The Parade lasted almost three hours, however the crowd warmed up quickly enjoying over 900 sevings of soup served in ceramic mugs donated by twelve local restaurants, the proceeds going to The Friends of Erin.

When in New York

12 Restaurants For $12 Or Less

By Allison Wiley

Few cities in the world can boast of the number, variety and quality of restaurants as those offered in New York. It is a culinary smorgasbord. In most cases, however, such diversity comes at a steep price. Savvy New Yorkers know that they do not have to pay four star prices to get a four star meal. Now we will share some of these secrets with you. The following twelve restaurants offer a delicious meal (appetizer, and entrée or entrée and dessert, plus tea or coffee) for $12 or less.

Milon and Panna II – These two "Little India" restaurants (95 First Avenue) offer soup, entrée and dessert from $4.60; soup, appetizer, entrée and dessert from $5.85. Each establishment includes a bowl of mango ice cream and spiced masala tea at the end of your meal, free of charge.

Dojo (14 West 4th Street/24 St. Marks Place) – Serves Asian inspired health food (also burgers, BBQ and BLT's). Each restaurant has four dining areas (including one outdoors) which serve excellent sesame noodles, chicken sukiyaki and kebabs. Prices range from $6.25 for appetizers and entrée. However, I suggest that you forget dessert and stroll to nearby Veniero's on Eleventh Street between First and Second Avenues which has the best Italian pastries this side of Naples.

New York Noodletown (28 1/2 Bowery) – You can spend a lot more money on Chinese food but you won't find anything better than at this small, crowded Chinatown legend. The standout items are the noodle dishes and the dumplings with two courses from $6.50.

Sapporo (152 West 49th Street) – The specialty here is soups with portions large enough for two meals, and soup and an entrée begins at $7.25. Other entrees of note (all of which come with miso soup, rice, and shredded cabbage) include chicken teriyaki, pork or chicken curry or a vegetable stir-fry. The atmosphere is fun, in a rough-and-tumble way.

Pepe Verde To Go (559 Hudson Street) – The food is pure Italian peasant fare and the self-serve restaurant is charming with two courses from $7.95. If there is an Italian favorite not listed on the menu, the owner/waiter/chef will be happy to make it for you.

Afghanistan Kebab House #3 (155 West 46th Street) – Consistently good food with a salad and entrée from $8.99; appetizer (or dessert), salad and entrée from $12. Recommendations: the $3 aushak (boiled flat dumplings) and bolanee pumpkin (fried turnovers).

Lemongrass Grill (2534 Broadway/80 University Place/37 Barrow) – Appetizer and entrée from $9.45, offers authentic Thai cooking in a whimsical "jungle hut" setting.

Gabriela's Mexican Restaurant (685 Amsterdam Avenue) – Offers authentic Mexican food in a festive atmosphere. The best suggestion is to order a table full of appetizers; a filling Mexican meal starts at $9.

Palacinka a Creperie (28 Grand Street) – Crepes for dinner and dessert are served in this funky and sophisticated Soho Café with entrée and desserts from $10.50. Also on the menu are elaborate sandwiches, salads and in winter, soups.

Chez Gnagna Koty's(530 Ninth Avenue) – An entrée and appetizer from $12 are offered at this cheerful, friendly African-inspired restaurant in Hell's Kitchen.

Hallo Berlin (402 West 51st Street and 626 10th Avenue) – These German-style restaurants reminiscent of a Berlin beer garden offer an entrée and appetizer from $9.50.

Republic 37 (Union Square West) – It's a scene with a frenetic singles bar which abounds with models and celebrities in the front area. A large communal dining area in the back features a tribute to pasta dishes from around the world with an appretizer and an entrée from $9. Open late, seven days a week.

TRIVIA QUESTION: Restaurant Row is located on 46th Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues. Where is "Eat Street"?

DAN TRAVELS

Here and There

These days, discriminating travelers are seeking a closer look at "real people living in real communities." They're interested in how peoples in areas other their own, are coping with today's world – how they treat their history, what they are willing to do to keep this knowledge alive, what they are planning for their children and grandchildren, how they are treating their environment, how they in general are earning their way in today's controversial world.

Most of Long Island's first-time visitors are curious about us, and we, when we travel, tend to be inquisitive about the life styles of those we are visiting. We aren't content to look and pass on. We ask questions, we show interest in things that are new to us, and we learn about similarities and differences, for Long Island is a unique composite. So, too, are many of the places we chose for our holidays.

One of the areas that could prove interesting is west central Georgia – less than a half day's trip from gigantic Atlanta. Even casual sightseeing – for those who will read up on available material well ahead of actually of arriving – can provide interesting insights, some rewarding exchanges of background information, some unexpectedly helpful museums done in meaningful displays and explanation and so many surprising experiences you'll wonder why you didn't try this kind of human interest travel sooner.

Since space is limited this account will contain only the major things a week's travel around Georgia's backcountry might provide.

Try Callaway Gardens, more than just a spread of fantastic laid out gardens. It's a special institution, including opportunities to play golf, browse through indoor-outdoor exotic gardens, slowly drive past enormous spreads of springs time azaelas, holly, and come December millions of lights lining a multi-lit brightway. Come summer, the circus comes to the gardens to get in open air practice sessions. And any time of year, the parkways lend themselves to slow-driving past well spaced floral displays. The gardens are named for millionaire Cason Calloway.

Equally impressive is the country's largest infantry concentration – Fort Benning. Here you'll learn more than you ever wanted to know about ground troops, including ever-changing displays of equipment, uniforms and other pertinent Army items.

Probably of all the concentrated things to see and do are two quite different attractions – the state's second largest city, Columbia, and the rural areas where such items as a gigantic (the world's largest probably) telephone museum with some items older folk barely remember and things the current generation never knew about such as party lines where "Ring Three" was part of the identification of a multi-use subscribers identification rooms and rooms of carefully collected phone equipment will keep visitors busy for hours.

Another country-side attraction is the Cotton Museum. Basically run by volunteers, this small but complete look at the development of cotton growing from the "early days" to modern techniques and equipment also includes a small plot where cotton is actually growing. Here's the place to have your photo taken, ask all the questions for which you don't have answers – the role of cotton in the fashion world and what one can do with cotton balls creatively.

Columbus, on the Chatta Tooche River, complete with a river walk that follows the twists and turns of the River, is one of the country's most intriguing small cities. In addition to the attractions already mentioned, it has the famed Springer Opera House that attracts all kinds of performances year round. Then there's the Civil War Naval Center (even though Columbus is miles from the sea). It is doing wonders in naval restoration for that period); and a bit in the outskirts is the growing-in-popularity conference center, Retreat at Blackshear which handles company and educational seminars with a waiting list for prime times. –Eunice Juckett Meeker

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

Looking for something fashionable in New York City? My sources tell me that Mackie by Bob Mackie and Lavantino announce this season's hottest sample/showroom sale on April 5, 6 and 7. The sale hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, the pricing is at wholesale or below. Sizes 4-14 in sensational day, evening and occasion dresses including separates. There are elegant European fabrics that enhance the original designs. Try ons are OK. Located at 498 Seventh Avenue between 36 and 37 Street on the 22nd floor. Call Mackie for additional information at 212-736-5505.

Back to reality, on the eastern end of Long Island where shopping is always a pleasure, I found a first ever "Warehouse Sale" ready to go for Saturday and Sunday, April 1 and 2 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Hampton Accent & Decorative Rug Center on Mariner Drive in Southampton. Artie, one of the owners who just so happens to be a good friend of mine, invites you and yours to join in on this incredible sale on furniture, oriental rugs and much more. Looking for comfortable clothing for life in the Hamptons?

Finally a sale! Where? After twenty years in the Hamptons, Gayle Wilson Gallery on Jobs Lane in Southampton is featuring a special sale with up to 70% off selected items until April 9. Well, everyone does a sale sooner or later!

Stop by The Deerfield Clothing and Supply Company on Hampton Road in Southampton. On sale now, Barbour, it only happens once a year so go for it.

At the Red Horse Plaza on the Montauk Highway East Hampton's The Elegant John at the Red Horse Plaza is gearing up for the upcoming spring season with a full inventory of upholstered sofas and chairs from the D&D Building in Manhattan. Well, if you hurry you will get the best choice and... how bout this one, 40% off. These sofas retail at $2500 to $3000 and are produced with hand tied springs. As a nice accessory, the Oriental lamps, valued up to $300 are now selling for $75 to $150, selling elsewhere for up to $500. Now that's a buy!

Also at the Red Horse Plaza stop in at the Naturopathica Spa where they constantly strive to cultivate a healing environment for their clients. Integrated restorative treatments that promote well being will always be their core focus. They have recently created a few new spa treatments and services specifically for the summer, and new treatments and products will be introduced on the Memorial Day weekend including: Sumatra Coconut Body Scrub, Cucumber Mint Aloe Glaze, Rosemary Citron Sea Salt Glow. So, whether you want a head-to-toe glow, (they sound delicious don't they or a distressing indulgence, call Naturopathica Spa for an appointment at 631-329-2525. I've already made an appointment for both my mom and myself. Can't wait!

Looking for great tennis outfits? At Tennis East on Main Street in East Hampton you will find what you need and more. Look for the 70% off sale that is going on right now. With a sale like this you can get one in every color...

While I was at the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Montauk, I still had shopping on my mind, and couldn't help but stop in to Claudia's Carriage House. This quaint shoppe is a trip into yesteryear with all the beautiful leaded glass lamps and light fixtures, beaded fringed lamps, dolls, doll furniture, some antique furniture, jewelry, Christmas ornaments, gift cards, and so much more. If you're in Montauk enter Claudia's world of enchantment; you will be amazed at what you see in this lovely gift shoppe.

Heading back home, charting my course for next week, I thought to myself, what a job!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

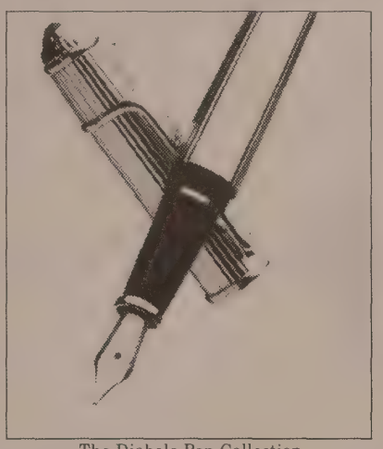
Must de Cartier and Diabolo Pen Collections

Spring has sprung and if you check your calendar, it won't be long before we are going to graduation parties. What would be the perfect gift for the millennium graduate? Cartier introduces an all platinum finish to the Must de Cartier and Diabolo Pen Collections. Modern and futuristic in look, yet rooted in over 150 years of history, the platinum collection redefines penmanship for the millennium. Cartier introduces pens that offer simplicity and elegance in a young, modern look.



The Diabolo Pen Collection

Platinum, the rarest and purest white metal, never tarnishes, making it a practical yet precious metal that enhances the timelessness of a unique writing instrument. Cartier, the leader in innovation and luxury goods, offers a collection of lightweight and competitively priced accessories with these latest additions.

The Must de Cartier Collection has been re-introduced with a sleek, modern platinum finish, The Must pen features the three gold rolling ring on the cap, instantly identifying its namesake. The nib, also decorated with the famous Cartier "C" logo, is 18K gold with a rhodium finish. The Must de Cartier pen makes a perfect gift for the graduate on his way to becoming a young executive.

The Diabolo Pen Collection, re-created in a platinum version, features a pattern of vertical godrons. This pen has an auto-elastic, one piece platinum overlay clip which is forged from a special alloy and is punctuated by the hallmark Cartier "C." three consecutive rings decorate the cap and the Cartier signature is engraved on each ring. The nib, also decorated with the famous Cartier "C" logo, is 18-k gold with a rhodium finish. Accentuating the cap, the jeweler's ultimate signature, is the famous Cartier blue cabochon. Celebrate professional and personal milestones with a Diablo signature. Technologically unrivaled, fashionably innovative the new platinum pen collection confirms Cartier as the true upscale writing specialist. The Must Collection is available in ballpoint and fountain pen modes. The Must II comes only in a ballpoint version. The Diabolo collection is available in four writing modes – fountain, ballpoint, rollerball and propelling pencil.

Another great gift idea is the Pasha watch, which is a reflection of modern luxury, redefining itself into three new and exciting designs; the Pasha is transformed into the ultimate accessory.

Bold in design and execution, the steel Pasha 38mm exudes strength. The guilloche-silvered dial with four black Arabic numerals are the focal points through the window of the grid. But in a single gesture, the grid can be removed and reveal the details of the dial: the luminous studs of the numerals, the date function of half past four. Transforming the practicality of protection into the character of style, the grids' duality reveals two very unique looks.

Perfect for eveningwear or everyday the mother-of-pearl dial Pasha produces myriad shades of grey that play between the dial and the charcoal grey patent leather strap. Surrounded by a steel case, the Arabic numerals are rhodium-plated and feature luminous studs. The mother of pearl dial shimmers and sparkles at all hours making this watch a true treasure. The Pasha C with the large date function redefines a classic Cartier model. Still faithful to the aesthetic of the Pasha C watches, with its steel case, cabochon and satin finish flat-link bracelet, the new version features a double aperture date function prominently displayed on the dial.

Available at all twenty-four U.S. Cartier boutiques. Call 1-800-Cartier for information. – Maria Tennariello

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

MEMBERS' EXHIBIT AT GUILD HALL

Like the current show at The Parrish Art Museum, the Members' Exhibit is similarly attuned to the community it serves. This time, the symbiotic relationship is between Guild Hall and East End artists, a connection that evokes the kind of equality that's welcomed all year round. A sense of "family" is also summoned as well as a sense of security that all is well in the Hamptons' art community. Yet this "feel-good" sensibility is often tempered with diverse "attitudes."

Wellness is reinforced when we look for works by our most established, recognizable artists, those with a discernable point-of-view, reflecting their creators' personality: Bill King's sculpture, a character with an "attitude" if ever there was one; Anneli Arms' wire and foil "Bat," another sculpture with "posture"; Dan Welden's "Florentine Eclipse," a gentle mixed media piece on paper; Frank Wimberley's lyrical collage; Margaret Kerr's stable brick work; and Ted Dragon's Honorable Mention, a flamboyant dyed wool piece.

Ryan's "Something Buried"

There are other works which echo their creator's attitude about a political/social issue rather than mirror an artist's personal qualitites: Janet Culbertson's subtle factory setting; Michael Knigin's digital print, "Finally the Truth" and Jay Hoops' digital photograph featuring a doll superimposed over a Manhattan street scene.

Then there are works which signify a "funky" attitude, a world-view that's slightly off center: Ronald Stein's "Jake," a grotesque, yet oddly beautiful lamb-man; Ruby Jackson's glass bowl of beads; Amy Ernst's costumed women, "Into the Woods"; and Mary Bayes Ryan's Honorable Mention, "Something Buried."

Finally, there's still something to be said about textures and materials that transcend the canvas, possessing an "attitude which makes an inanimate object truely animate: Carolyn Haas' "Snow Fences" Pam Erickson- Davis' "Seventh Lizard Shed" Mark Seidenfeld's "Airhead in Chains" and Edward Haugevik's "Death."

The Members' Exhibit will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until April 8.

Honoring the Artist: Lois Gold

While the expression, "The more things change, the more they stay the same," is one we've heard before, it is no less true when applied to painter Lois Gold. Ms. Gold has been experimenting a long time now with diverse media and subject matter saying, "Anything that breaks the pattern, gives variety, is good," yet she keeps returning to landscape as her favorite imagery and a recurring theme of beach paths.

Lois Gold

These latter images are particularly intriguing, serving as a metaphor for Ms. Gold's journey through life – a quest that is at once exciting and dangerous. As she herself puts it, "The paths show my not knowing what the future will hold for me now that I'm on my own for the first time. They represent both compositional form and subjectivity. I concentrate on shadows that go across the paths; they're obstacles that progress from dark to light. From danger to excitment."

The literal and figurative contradictions inherent in these shadows as well as in Ms. Gold's beach paths provide a clue to the artist's artistic endeavors. Take, for example, her opposing stylistic tendencies: abstraction and Photorealism. (This week's cover painting on Dan's Papers does not fall neatly into either style, however, yet lends itself more to abstraction.) Her experimentation has also led to aesthetic contradiction: her cover art shows a penchant for various hues; her smaller watercolors are monochromatic and evoke a more harmonious effect.

Another fascinating contradiction includes viewer response to her work. Her landscapes invite the spectator into her pieces while her still lifes are "in your face," as she describes them. Another opposition exists in her still lifes. When she was just starting to paint in her late twenties and early thirties, Ms. Gold says she did "many objects, rendering them in a traditional way." (Now she'll concentrate on a single object, often a piece of fruit).

While Ms. Gold has lived a busy life, she can still pinpoint the experiences and places which have fueled her art and, by extension, her journey through life: "Living in New York, I am influenced by the shows I see (recently including a Turner exhibit) and the places I go, like Province and Tuscany, although I've only been there once. I also spent a month in Bridgehampton last summer where I rented a house; that had a big impact." So, too, does the journal she keeps where she records images from her dreams.

Whether Ms. Gold gets inspiration from real or imagined experiences, we sense that she is always traveling forward along those beach paths, ready to take on whatever life offers.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Gold will be showing at East Hampton's Lizan Tops Gallery, May 6- 21 and again, August 19- Sept. 5.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Last week's premiere "They Made The Movie Here" presentation, Last Summer in the Hamptons was a smash, sell-out. OK... so the admission is free... never the less, a capacity audience enjoyed a posh few hours in what one might assume to be Darryl Zannuck's Fox screening room. Actually, it is the Ross School Library so, there are no teak cigar thermidors but, this week refreshments will be served along with a smashingly clever..murder, mayhem and magnificent mulligan stew of unexpected mix-ups, comedy shocker... titled Death Trap, Ira Levin's clash and flash Broadway hit made for the screen by producer/screenplay adapter Jay Presson Allen and director, Sidney Lumet and others of the Who's Who in the Hamptons: producer Alfred de Liagre, Jr, designer Tony Walton and special effects whiz Brian Ferron and many more. Naturally it is the stars who really create the lightning flashes in this dark-and-stormy night thriller.

The rascally fine, fine actor Michael Caine is in perfect form as a once highly successful mystery playwright ... now with four successive flops... who would kill (literally) for a hit, when along comes Christopher Reeve with his first play that is so flawless... even a gifted director couldn't ruin it. Also starring, terrifically is East Hampton, always out there, sneaking around with its misty, glamour-puss charm.

The movie opens on Broadway, the curtain has come down on Sidney Bruhl's (Caine) most recent flop. He gets "opening night" plastered and on the milk train home sleeps through to Montauk and a $52 cab fare home to East Hampton and his home built around a Windmill. In his antiquey, country, charming house is his ailing but, still a loose noisy cannon is his wealthy wife, Dyan Cannon, to whom he reels off his litany of woes but! the worst blow was receiving an absolutely perfect play written by an ex-seminar student (Reeve). Though his wife has money, Bruhl wants the success as well as the three to four million dollars this play could earn. After all, his Hampton house is expensive and there is his massive collection of weapons, old and new: daggers, cross-bows, maces, battle axes etc. Some are real some are stage props. What would you do if your house was furnished to the hilt with swords and stuff? Wouldn't you invite the novice out to give him the benefit of your expertise in murder mysteries? And, maybe do it with one of those blunt or very sharp objects?

This is just the start of a series of plots that go and spin around and go and stop and go around. It is bloody and fun and will also scare the panties off you. Complications and surprises seemingly never end and there's that Dutch psychic sleuth who foretells crimes before they happen and she has rented the cottage next door and oh, m'gosh there are those dark and very stormy nights.

Get to the Ross School at 18 Goodfriend Drive (off Route 114) in the mystery town of East Hampton, even if you have to take the LIRR. Be sure to get there by 3 p.m. to get an up front seat in time to experience a lovely music video of wave action on welcoming beaches, glittering like star formations in Tidal Galaxies by Karola Ritter, a seven minute contemplation acquired by the LTV Studios. Then brace yourselves!

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer, director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the Dan's Paper Film Festival mentioned above.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Move over oat bran, brown rice and hulled barley and make room for quinoa, farro and wheatberry. These are a few of the new grains in town that are becoming popular as energizing, healthy foods. They also taste good, have wonderful textures and a satisfying nuttiness.

In her splendid book, The Splendid Grain, Morrow, author Rebecca Wood boasts of the high nutritional superiority of quinoa to other grains and the high quality protein it contains. Ms. Wood refers to the cooked grain as having a dual texture, as a result of the thin germ circlet that falls away from the seed, remaining crunchy "and very interesting to eat." The orange-flavored quinoa recipe in her book makes a good breakfast dish and a great base for a fruit salad.

Did you know that every time you make a tabouleh salad with bulgur, you are eating wheatberries that were steamed and hulled, then dried and cracked? This concentrated source of essential nutrients is known to enhance stamina and endurance. It is necessary to cook wheatberries for 40-50 minutes. But toast them first for about 5 minutes in a skillet until they pop, giving off a pleasant wheaty aroma. They can be used in a salad or vegetable stew, as featured below.

Farro, also known as spelt, is a type of soft wheat, and the preferred wheat of the ancient Romans. Like most grains, farro must be soaked before cooking, about 45 minutes in cold water. And like wheatberries, toast them first. Farro may be boiled ahead and kept for several days, refrigerated and covered, in a large glass or crockery bowl. Use the grain in salads and soups.

All natural wheat products are best purchased at a natural foods store or specialty store where they are most likely to be organic and fresh because of high turnover.

BREAKFAST QUINOA

This recipe calls for ghee, a much used ingredient in Indian cookery, which is simply clarified butter made from unsalted butter only.*
Makes 3 3/4 cups

2 cups fresh orange juice
1 teaspoon ghee
1 teaspoon honey
1/8 teaspoon sea salt
1 cup imported quinoa or 1 1/3 cups domestic quinoa, well washed
2 tablespoons chopped pecans, toasted and chopped very fine

Combine the orange juice, ghee, honey and salt in a medium saucepan over high heat and bring to a boil. Watch closely to keep the orange juice from boiling over. Add the quinoa, cover, lower the heat, and simmer for 12 to 15 minutes or until all the juice has been absorbed. Remove from heat and let rest for 5 minutes. Add the pecans and fluff with a fork.

For the ghee - Put 1 stick unsalted butter in a saucepan over medium-high heat and bring to a boil. As it boils, the butter will foam, crackle and bubble. After 6-8 minutes when the bubbling and foaming almost cease and the sound changes to a sizzling frying oil sound it is done. Immediately remove from the heat or the ghee might burn. Cool slightly. Pour through a dampened cheesecloth or a fine metal strainer into a glass or ceramic container, leaving the milk solids behind. (May be stored covered, at room temperature for 4 or more months.)

Reprinted from Rebecca Woods, The Splendid Grain, Morrow.

WHEATBERRIES WITH MUSHROOM SAUTE

For basic preparation just boil the wheatberries for 40-45 minutes until the grains are tender. They have a rich, nutty and satisfying flavor when added to salads or sautes.
Serves 4

1 cup wheatberry
2 1/2 cups water
Coarse (kosher) salt
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 shallots, finely chopped
1/3-1/2 pound shitake and button mushrooms, stemmed, rinsed and thinly sliced
1/2 cup chicken broth
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

Toast the wheatberries in a saucepan over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, for about 5 minutes, or until they pop. Rinse the berries in a strainer and drain. Put the berries in a medium saucepan, add the water, and let soak for at least one hour. Bring to a boil over high heat, add salt, cover, lower the heat, and simmer for 40-45 minutes, or until berries are tender. Let rest, covered for 10 minutes then fluff with a fork.

Heat the oil in a non-stick skillet and when hot add the onions. Saute for a minute or so until onions are translucent. Add the mushrooms and saute for 2-3 minutes then add the broth. Bring to a boil and simmer briskly until most of the liquid is evaporated, about 5-6 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Add cooked wheatberries and parsley to the mixture and stir to mix. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Steakhouse Stir-Fry Easier Than Ever

With the fat content of beef today 27 percent less than it was in the early 80s, lean beef can be enjoyed even by people on a heart-healthy diet, according to the National Cattleman's Association. The leanest cuts of beef available are those with loin or round in the name.

Great-tasting beef dishes are easier than ever with Swanson's new Seasoned Beef Broth with Onion. It adds full-bodied beef and flavor without extra fat. It's a real time-saver for people who love the aromatic flavor of slow cooked onions but don't have the time to peel, slice and sauté and prefer not to add fat.

A savory, quick weeknight dish with great simmered-in flavor is Steakhouse Onion, Beef and Pepper Stir-fry. Lean sirloin and green or red pepper strips are deliciously sauced with Seasoned Beef Broth with Onion, soy sauce and garlic powder. Serve it to your family over hot cooked rice and bask in the compliments.

For a free booklet of 24 easy recipes and tips for cooking with broth, Simply Delicious Low-Fat Recipes with Swanson® Broth, call toll-free 1-800-44-BROTH (1-800-442-7682). Also, visit www.swansonbroth.com for cooking tips and recipes.

Steakhouse Onion, Beef and Pepper Stir-Fry

Prep time: 10 min.

Cook time: 20 min.

1 lb. Boneless beef sirloin steak, 3/4" thick

3 tbsp. cornstarch

1 can (14 1/2 oz.) Swanson® Seasoned Beef Broth with Onion

1 tbsp. soy sauce

1/4 tsp. garlic powder

2 cups fresh or thawed frozen green or red pepper strips

4 cups hot cooked rice, cooked without salt

1. Slice beef into very thin strips. Set aside. Mix cornstarch, broth, soy, and garlic powder. Set aside.

2. In nonstick skillet over medium-high, stir-fry beef until browned and juices evaporate.

3. Add peppers. Stir cornstarch mixture and add. Cook over medium heat until mixture boils and thickens; stirring constantly. Stir over rice. Serves 4.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Regular readers of this column know by now that Long Island Farm Bureau and Cornell Cooperative Extension (CCE) have a long history of working closely together to help preserve Long Island agriculture. Bill Sanok, the Agricultural Program Director, writes a column in CCEs "Agricultural News" directed mainly at growers. His column in February's issue, however, would be of some interest to everyone. With his consent, I offer the following from his article on a report released in July, 1999, by the Suffolk County Department of Health Services concerning pesticides in groundwater.

"The 1999 monitoring report was part of the New York State Pesticide Sales and Use Reporting Law of 1996. Samples were taken over an 18-month period (October 1997 March 1999) from 2,306 sites across Long Island. These sites included surface water, private wells, community and non-community wells, and wells used solely for monitoring purposes. The sampling procedure prioritized monitoring of shallow wells in agricultural areas where residues had been found in previous samplings. Based on this sampling procedure, the results were a measure of the current status of known contaminated wells.

"The results of the sampling were as follows:

There were thirty-two pesticides or metabolites of pesticides in Long Island groundwater, fifteen in Nassau County and thirty in Suffolk County.

Ten of the pesticides were detected at greater than the MCLs (maximum contaminant levels), which is the action level for drinking water.

Six of these ten pesticides have long been banned for use on Long Island. These are aldicarb (Temik), Dacthal, Chlordane, Dinoseb, 1,2 dichloropropane (Telone), and Ethylene Dibromide.

Four chemicals above the MCLs that had not been banned at the time of the report include alachlor (Lasso), 1,2,3 trichloropropane, Simazine, and DEHP.

Since the release of the report, alachlor has been banned from use on Long Island.

Simazine was discovered as a contaminant where it was applied as an industrial right of way herbicide at very high rates.

DEHP is a plasticizer, and contamination has been found from other sources in addition to pesticides.

"There were a number of pesticides found in the sampling program below the MCLs and these include Atrazine, 2,4D, Banvel, Endosulfan, MCPP, Ridomil, Lannate and Sencor/Lexone.

"Because of the 1999 report and the continued concern for the potential for pesticides in groundwater, Dale Moyer [Extension Educator – Potato and Vegetable] is heading up the Environmental Stewardship Task Force. The group is to work with the agricultural industry, regulatory agencies and others to come up with a more proactive approach to deal with the issues. They are working with Maureen Serafini in NYSDEC to develop a monitoring system so that newer, less toxic and more environmentally acceptable pesticides can be properly registered for use on Long Island. Newer crop protection chemicals are needed to replace those that have or will cause problems in our groundwater supply.

"To accomplish this, there needs to be a coordinated effort with representatives of the chemical industry, the Suffolk County Department of Health Services, NYSDEC, all of the agricultural agencies and, of course, growers who need to protect their crops. For this reason, we need the full cooperation and support of growers in the fruit, vegetable, greenhouse, sod and nursery industries.

"With the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), Suffolk County Soil and Water Conservation Service (SCSWCS), Farm Service Agency (FSA), NYSDEC, LI Farm Bureau, Suffolk County and other agencies, Cornell Cooperative Extension will be looking for ways of implementing good management practices through cost shared programs.

"This is an extremely important issue and has influenced our agriculture in the past and will influence it even more in the future. Everyone's cooperation is needed now more than ever before."

Bill is right. LIFB, CCE and many others are determined to ensure that both our groundwater quality and agricultural heritage are preserved for future generations.

Tufts Research Focuses On The Power Of Childhood Food

Want your children to develop lifelong healthy eating habits? Start early, say the experts.

Recent research by nutrition experts at Tufts University School of Nutrition Science and Policy shows that young children can learn healthy eating habits if parents follow a few easy techniques.

According to Susan Roberts, Tufts University nutrition researcher and professor, kids need different types of nutrients than adults.

"Most parents don't have access to the most recent research into children's needs and some advice from the past is positively harmful. In fact, it has actually contributed to our current epidemic of childhood obesity," said Roberts. "In addition, some health-conscious parents are feeding their young children very low-fat, high-fiber diets, which can result in serious medical problems for kids."

Today's eating habits and nutritional guidelines may put the health of kids in jeopardy-because what is good for adults is not necessarily good for children.

"Children have very different nutritional needs than adults," said Roberts, co-author of Feeding Your Child for Lifelong Health (Bantam, 1999). "There are many aspects of health and development that are influenced by what children eat, such as their future IQ, motor development, even bone strength. All the essential developmental processes need nutrients-the right ones in the right amounts, at the right developmental time."

Of course, even the best foods won't work if the child won't eat them.

Roberts, also a professor of psychiatry at Tufts Medical School, offers some simple rules to help parents build on kids' natural instincts about food:

1. Accept a division of control. You decide what foods to offer, but your child decides how much to eat and whether he is hungry.

2. Exploit the window of opportunity between 12 and 21 months. This is a good age to familiarize children with as many healthy foods as possible since they instinctively put everything in their mouths and can safely eat a lot of the same foods you do.

3. Make an ally of your child's variety instinct. Serve a wide variety of foods you want her to like. Offer a limited amount of foods you want to de-emphasize. For example, a lot of fruits and vegetables and only one type of plain cookie.

4. Overcome a two-year-old's naturally conservative attitude about food with the rule of fifteen. Offer food up to 15 times before it is accepted. Be low-key about refusals.

5. Children learn by comparing new food experiences with tastes, appearances and textures they already know. If your conservative three-year-old likes mashed potatoes, try mashed sweet potatoes and cooked carrots.

6. Teach by example. Be a good food role model. If your child picks up dubious food influences from peers or TV, let him try some things away from home and keep family menus healthy.

7. Avoid persuasion and active encouragement. Your child may resist any food that's pushed on him. Offer food opportunities with the understanding that your child is free to say no.

8. Children are drawn to foods they help grow or harvest. Gardening – or even talking about foods at the supermarket – can make otherwise unglamorous foods more appealing.

Roberts' laboratory work and experience at Tufts University School of Nutrition Science and Policy shows that childhood nutrition can offer long-term, permanent advantages in mental and physical development and health. In Feeding Your Child for Lifelong Health, www.feedingyour child.com, Roberts and co-author Dr. Melvin Heyman, professor of pediatrics and Chief of Pediatric Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Nutrition at the University of California, offer sound scientific advice and tackle a variety of important nutritional questions on childhood metabolic programming for lifetime nutrition.

Tufts School of Nutrition Science and Policy is the only independent school of nutrition in North America. The school's nine centers, which focus on questions relating to famine, hunger, poverty and communications, are renowned for the application of scientific research to national and international policy. For two decades the Tufts University Jean Mayer USDA Human Nutrition Research Center for the Aging has studied the relationship between good nutrition and good health in aging populations.

Sunbathe With New Protection

Spending time in the sun used to be the best way to achieve a healthy, radiant glow – until people learned how hazardous even casual sun exposure can be.

Fortunately, there are healthier ways to achieve that glow while protecting your skin from sun damage.

One is to use a colored sunscreen that contains a natural substance that already exists in the body-melanin. New sunscreens, such as Melasyn, feature a unique natural melanin that spreads evenly and easily on the skin to provide the look of a natural healthy glow with the semblence of good health.

It makes you look healthy and it may keep you healthy.

The melanin in Melasyn Instant Tan Lotion was originally identified as a potential preventative for skin cancer and is derived from the aloe plant, well known for its ability to soothe skin.

Melasyn, a synthetic melanin, was invented by researchers at Yale University School of Medicine and is said to be the first natural colored sunscreen. The lotion also features a powerful, full spectrum SPF 15 to protect the skin from sun damage.

"The products act like natural melanin in the skin. Adding an SPF to the cosmetics means users can not only look good but can protect their skin from various skin cancers and wrinkles," said John M. Pawelek, Ph.D.

The SPF 15 offers full spectrum protection against the sun's UV A&B rays. Full spectrum protection is possible with the Food and Drug Administration's approval of Parsol 1789, an active ingredient that absorbs UV energy before it enters the skin.

All Melasyn cosmetics are available via a toll free number (888/322-1335) and the web (www.melasyncosmetics.com). The Instant Tan lotion sells for under $25.

Any lotion said to protect you from the sun naturally and add a healthy radiance to your skin can easily be described as a natural.

Daily sun protection never looked so good. Yale scientists have invented the only natural colored sunscreen.

Dan's Papers is looking out for your good health.

POLICE BLOTTER

Some hunters in East Hampton thought they finally got their thirty point buck last week, but it turned out to be a cement statue. Robert Anderson of Indian Hill Road reported that his $300 statue suffered a cracked head as a result of being pushed over. Police have no leads on the hapless hunter.

A yellow Liquimatic motorized scooter valued at $500 was reported stolen in Montauk from Robert Bessler's home on South Elroy Road. Apparently the thief just needed a ride down to the local watering hole, as Bessler's ride was found the next day parked in front of The Old Shebeen, a bar across from the Montauk train station.

After being arrested for harassment last year for allegedly threatening to kill his neighbor, Kevin G. Delemarre, 47, of Rick's Cottages was later also charged with a felony count of criminal mischief. Delemarre allegedly stuffed a soda bottle down the toilet of his jail cell, at the East Hampton police station, causing the cell block, booking room and the dispatch center to flood. He also allegedly broke an intercom. Delemarre plead guilty and paid a $100 fine.

* * *

A North Sea man was reportedly warming up his truck in his driveway before he left for work, when his neighbor allegedly reached into the cab, took the keys and threw them across the yard. When questioned, the neighbor explained that at 6:50 a.m. on a Saturday, the sound of an idling diesel engine is not the way he likes to be awakened. The truck owner is considering pressing charges.

* * *

A very thorough thief in Remsenburg entered through a garage window. The thief was apparently was after appliances as washer and dryer, two refrigerators and six fans were reported missing. The stolen appliances are valued at $11,542.

After responding to a reported disturbance on Flamingo Road in Montauk, police found the contents of a woman's purse strewn along the road. A quick check of the contents allowed police to track down the alleged owner of said purse, Julia Bartlett, an owner of the Montauk Manor.

According to police, Ms. Bartlett was found at the Manor, allegedly drunk and with a large cut on her head. She claimed that the man involved had stolen her 1988 Ford Thunderbird.

Police soon found the T-bird weaving down Flamingo Road. The driver, John M. Gallo, 39, of Duvall Place in Montauk, claimed that he and Ms. Barlett had been having an argument, and she opened the door and jumped out of the moving car, he also failed a field sobriety test according to police. Upon further inspection, police reportedly found a small bag of marijuana on Gallo's pocket. He was charged with DWI and unlawful possession of marijuana.

A home on Route 114 had its door kicked in. Nothing was stolen, as the invader apparently had another purpose: he left a hatchet on the homeowner's pillow.

Dan's LETTERS

ARE THEY THAT GOOD?
Dear Dan,

How wonderful is life that issues such as gun control, the forthcoming elections, housing, tax policy, settlements on the West bank, prayer in the schools, crime in the street and such nuisance pale alongside the Kathleen's cooky-famine. Really the lead story (March 9 number). Two whole pages. Do they really taste that good?

THANKS FOR RED BALL COVERAGE
Dear Dan,

On behalf of Martin Richards and the Producer Circle, we would like to extend sincere thanks for your gracious coverage of the Red Ball on Monday, February 14. "SORELY LACKING"?
Dear Dan,

I've always enjoyed your gift for narrative, while also admiring the journalist never far behind. Both skills were sorely lacking in last weeks' article on Jerry Seinfeld's purchase of Billy Joel's Hampton home and property.

Why did Dan the storyteller fail to reveal the name of the bigot who drafted the original (currently unenforceable and illegal) sales contract? That would have been a disgusting and disreputable piece of Hampton history worth looking into. And why did Dan the newsman, usually objective and principled, pander to today's sickos by describing Seinfeld as "very Jewish?" the only label that accurately depicts the Seinfeld persona is "very funny."

MORE IMPORTANT THAN WILLY?
Dear Dan,

Dan, had to send you another note after reading about the Free Willy fiasco. Can't these people find anything better to do with their money than trying to make their Walt Disney fantasies about a killer whale come true? Aren't there still people starving to death in Third World countries? Please.

KAT'S MARVELOUS
Dear Dan,

Thank you so much for Katlean deMonchy's marvelous piece on The Red Ball. You have no idea how much an article like hers means to our fund-raising efforts. I appreciate your support and the glamorous presence of Katlean deMonchy at this event. Thank you.

WRONG STATION
Dear Dan,

I have lived in Southampton since 1973 and have read your paper for a lot of years. This is the first time I am responding to an article. Superstars and Superhero's, Jan. 28, 00 The line;... a team of comedy writers at NBC sat around a table for several hours until they could come up with this line...Should NBC have been CBS? You do remember that Dave Letterman moved to CBS a few years ago? Or are you just trying to see who is paying attention? I am. Nice paper, I enjoy it. Keep up the good work.

HOMEOWNERS WITH MONEY WORRIES MAY QUALIFY FOR LOW INTEREST LOANS
Loans: Direct lender loosens its requirements for homeowners who need money now.
Have you been turned down for a loan? Do you need more than $10,000 for any reason? Are you paying more than 10% interest on any other loans or credit cards?
If you are a homeowner and answered yes to any of these questions, they can tell you over the phone and without obligation if you qualitfy.
High credit card debt? Less than perfect credit? Self-employed? Late house payments? Financial problems? Medical bills? IRS liens? It doesn't matter!
If you are a homeowner with sufficent equity, there's an excellent chance you will qualify for a loan – usually within 24 hours.
You can find out over the phone – and free of charge if you qualify – Stone Castle Home Loans is licensed by the NY State Banking Department. Call 1-800-700-1242 ext 263.
